Not illustrated. 1899 Excerpt: .forme to discuss the vast subject before this meeting; and yet, in view of the general invitation extended to many architectural societies, and therefore only in my capacity as the representative of the T Square Club, I may perhaps be permitted to contribute a modest suggestion which comes strictly within the architect s sphere of action. It is the concentrating, when possible, of street fixtures into compact and economical groups. To be sure, it is but a detail of the subject under discussion; yet since the scheme (in one of its phases) has been carefully worked out, the design may be of real value. As the accompanying illustrations show, the design forms a monumental electric fountain and aquatic garden: includes a drinking fountain, two bootblacking stands and a public toilet-room, as well as such minor departments of the public service as fire-alarm and police call-boxes, street...
